

Bronze Medal Award

I. DEFINITION AND HISTORY

The honor of Bronze Medal of the Society recognizes ASM members who are in early-career positions, typically, 0 to 10 years of experience, for their significant contributions in the field of materials science & engineering through technical content and service to ASM and the materials science profession.

The Bronze Medal Award recognizes outstanding young professionals and encourages individual growth and further contributions to the profession as well as the Society. Candidates for the Bronze Medal Award will have made significant technical contributions to the society and are not yet considered experienced enough to be eligible for the Silver Medal Award. This award serves to recognize and encourage early career members.

Annually, up to two individuals (one academic and one non-academic) may be selected to receive the ASM Bronze Medal based on commendable personal reputation and significant technical accomplishments in some phase of materials science, engineering, production, manufacturing, design, and technology transfer, application of technology, and development, research, or education as well as service to ASM and the profession of materials science.

Judging will be based on two equally weighted criteria: 1) significant technical accomplishments in the field of materials science and engineering; and 2) volunteer professional service, through ASM.

It is ASM's commitment to be inclusive and mindful of diversity in our policies, programs, courses, awards, and interactions with others. As an organization, we affirm and encourage nominations of qualified candidates, within each award's criteria, regardless of their age, culture, ethnic origin, gender, gender identity, marital status, nationality, race, religion, sexual orientation, and socioeconomic status.
