

Silver Medal Award

I. DEFINITION AND HISTORY

The honor of Silver Medal of the Society recognizes ASM members who are in mid-career positions (typically, 10 to 20 years of experience) for distinguished contributions in the field of materials science & engineering and for service to ASM and the materials science profession. The purpose of this award is to recognize outstanding leadership and professional service at an early stage and encourage individuals to grow, nurture, and further contribute to the growth of the profession as well as the Society.

Each year, up to two individuals, (one academic nominee and one non-academic nominee) in mid-career will be selected to be an ASM Silver Medallist due to good personal reputation and outstanding accomplishments in some phase of materials science, engineering, production, manufacturing, management, marketing, design, technology transfer, application of technology, and development, research or education as well as service to ASM and the profession of materials science. Judging will be based on three equally weighted criteria: 1) outstanding technical and/or business accomplishments in the field of materials science and engineering; 2) beneficial impact of the individual's contributions on industry and society; 3) volunteer professional service, especially through ASM. At the discretion of the selection committee, some preference may also be given to nominees whose contributions have not already been recognized with other prestigious awards.

It is ASM's commitment to be inclusive and mindful of diversity in our policies, programs, courses, awards, and interactions with others. As an organization, we affirm and encourage nominations of qualified candidates, within each award's criteria, regardless of their age, culture, ethnic origin, gender, gender identity, marital status, nationality, race, religion, sexual orientation, and socioeconomic status.
